

Contents

List of Tables	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Abbreviations Used in the Presentation of Data	xiii
Other Abbreviations	xvii
Chapter 1. Laying the Foundation	1
1.1 The Language Situation in Jamaica	3
1.2 Methodology	16
1.3 Limitations of the Study	25
1.4 Aims of the Research and the Structure of the Book	27
Chapter 2. Theoretical Bases of the Study	29
2.1 The Acquisition of a First Language	30
2.2 The Acquisition of a Second Language	34
2.3 The Role of Input in Acquisition	37
2.4 Code-Switching	39
2.5 Minimalism	44
Chapter 3. How the Children Use and Create Words	53
3.1 Inventories of Sounds in JC versus JE	54
3.2 The Categorical Composition of the Children's Vocabulary	64
3.3 Adjectival Modification	73
3.4 Word Formation Strategies	76

Chapter 4. What the Children Do with Nouns	87
4.1 Count and Non-Count Nouns	88
4.2 Number Marking in JC versus JE	91
4.3 The Expression of (In)Definiteness	100
4.4 Possessive Noun Phrases	116
4.5 Concluding Remarks	132
Chapter 5. What the Children Do with Verbs	133
5.1 Tense	133
5.2 Aspect	137
5.3 Back to Tense	152
5.4 Weaving of JE and JC	157
5.5 Summary and Conclusion	167
Chapter 6. Bringing It All Together	169
6.1 Specific Issues in the Nominal and Verbal Domains	170
6.2 The Relative Distribution of JE and JC Structures in the Children's Usage	175
6.3 Blurred Boundaries and Their "Un-Blurring"	178
6.4 Levels of Language Awareness and Literacy	188
6.5 Concluding Remarks	198
Appendices	201
Appendix 1. The Cassidy-JLU Writing System	201
Appendix 2. The Lexical-Functional Distinction	203
Appendix 3. Other Codes Used for Tagging	205
Appendix 4. The Type-Token Distinction	206
Appendix 5. SHared Words with Different Meanings	208
Appendix 6. JConly Words	209
Appendix 7. List of Plural Fossils Used	210
Notes	211
References	225
Index	243